Behavioral Style and Leadership – Building Productive Relationships & Collaboration in the Workplace

Keynote Speaker:

Jon Finch, VP of Training and Recruiting for Milwaukee Tool, has spent the last 19 years working on finding the best people to help the company realize growth over 20% each year. He has held multiple roles in sales, operations, training and recruiting. Jon has inspired the vision for and built the Pudwill Leadership Center to train and develop employees to quickly learn the business and be successful in their roles. He embraces the technology for each generation entering the business and focuses on productivity and profitability required to sustain growing business needs. With over a decade of recruiting and leadership experience, Jon has a trained eye for the future and has led multiple teams to engage the next generation of talent. A thought leader in the industry, Jon has spent the last few years sharing Milwaukee's success in recruiting, developing and leading the best people with interactive sessions throughout the building construction industry.

Session Overview:

Your leadership toolbox is not complete without a clear model to support your interactions with other people. Within the large topic of communication skills, knowing your own behavior style and identifying and adapting to the styles of others will significantly impact your leadership success.

This Behavior Styles session is a classroom training and personalized learning experience that can benefit every person in your organization. It focuses overall on building more productive and effective relationships in the workplace. In this session you'll be taught how to understand yourself and others, while learning to appreciate the different priorities, preferences and values each individual brings to the workplace. With personalized insights and actionable strategies, participants will learn how to adapt to the style of others, ultimately improving engagement, collaboration and the overall quality of the workplace.
